THREE KILLED WHEN BUS HITS AUTO, TURNS OVER

Nine Injured Near Batavia; Autos Lock Wheels

BATAVIA, O., June 4. — Three persons were killed and nine injured last night when a Cincinnati-Columbus bus skidded into a ditch and overturned after locking wheels with an automobile seven miles from here.

The dead: Mr. Edward C. Ireton and wife of Marathon, O., and Mrs. Lucy B. Schoyer, 60, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Occupants of the bus denied it was traveling at an excessive rate of speed.

Rev. Alvis S. Bennett, 57, Hartford, Ky., one of the occupants of the bus, said the vehicle was traveling slowly in the middle of the road when the machine attempted to pass it on the right. The wheels of the two vehicles interlocked and both went into the ditch after skidding 175 feet.

The driver of the bus, Edward Conaughy, was among those seriously hurt. He said he put on the brakes as soon as the wheels came together but could not bring the bus to a stop in time.

Edward Ourlay, driver of the auto and son of the Clermont County coroner was seriously injured.

Seven of the injured were taken to Cincinnati and two were removed to Hillsboro.

Among those injured were Mrs. G. B. Beecher, 75, Hillsboro, sister of Mrs. Schoyer; William Schoole, 17, Cleveland; Mrs. Catherine Braun, 18, Columbus; Mason McConaughy, 26, Hillsboro farmer; Joseph Brown, 40, San Antonio, Texas, carpenter, Mrs. Inez Post, 30, and Florence Bobb, 24.

Sheriff Robert Roberts began an investigation of the crash today.

MANSFIELD FAMILY ARRESTED IN THEFT OF VALUABLE MAIL

Takes $12,000 Pouch
When Hauling Mail
To Postoffice

TOLEDO, O., June 5.—Four members of a Mansfield family were under arrest here today in connection with a $12,000 mail robbery in Mansfield on April 23.

They are Hugo P. Ohly, 48; his wife, Gertrude, 48; a son, Victor, 24, and a daughter, Florence, 26.

The four are held by federal authorities on a technical charge of suspicion although secret service operatives declared the elder Ohly has confessed to perpetrating the robbery.

Another son, 15 years old, was taken into custody but was to be returned to Mansfield today.

The Ohlys were arrested late yesterday after the elder Ohly attempted to give a department store clerk bond coupons in exchange for purchases. The coupons were valued at $113, federal officials declared.

The clerk notified George Morrison, secretary of the Retail Credit Association who summoned special Detectives Dave Rogers and William Matheny and Detective George Timiney.

The detectives said they found bond coupons in the possession of all of the Ohlys, except the youngest son. A cigar box found in the Ohly car also was said to have contained coupons and bonds valued at $5000.

Officers said that Victor Ohly holds the contract for hauling mail from the post office to the railway station in Mansfield.

The father and another son, Kenneth, alternate with Victor on eight-hour hauling shifts, they said. Detectives told the United Press that Hugo Ohly gave them a detailed oral confession of the robbery.

On the night of the robbery, the officers quoted him as saying, Ohly noted a sack of registered mail on his truck.

After he had placed the other parcels of mail on the station platform he took the registered sack, the officers say, and drove to his home with it.

The detectives then quoted Ohly as saying he found one $1000 Liberty bond, a $500 bond, five or six valuable checks and $5000 worth of bond coupons in the sack. Ohly, according to the officers, said he burned the useless letters, the mail pouch, watches and other articles found in the sack, then threw the pouch's brass lock into a ditch several miles from Mansfield.

Ohly was questioned by postal authorities following the robbery but steadfastly maintained his innocence.

The fact that a stolen automobile was found parked near the station the night of the robbery, misled investigators, it was said. Ohly, the detectives declared, told his wife, daughter and older sons of the robbery and gave each of them bond coupons.

LABOR WILL ASSUME CHARGE OF BRITISH HOME GOVERNMENT

Baldwin Resigns; MacDonald To Form Next Cabinet.

LONDON, June 4.—The Home government of the far-flung British Empire, with its 463,000,000 population, was turned over to Labor today for the second time in its history.

Stanley Baldwin, conservative prime minister for the last four and one-half years, called on the ailing king today and submitted his resignation which was accepted as a matter of course.

J. Ramsay MacDonald, the dour, Socialist Scotsman who led his party to victory in last Thursday's general election, will call on the king tomorrow and accept the crown's invitation to form a government.

Baldwin was received by the king at his bedside in Windsor Castle, traditional seat of the Windsor line, and officially informed the sovereign that the Tory government lost its majority in the election. Acting on precedent, the king accepted the premier's resignation and was prepared to call on MacDonald to take over the government.

The Labor cabinet probably will be installed before the week end. It will include Philip Snowden, financial genius of the Labor party, as chancellor of the exchequer; Arthur Henderson, who was Home secretary in the first Labor government; J. H. Thomas, the former railway worker who was Colonial secretary in the first Labor government; Commander J. M. Kenworthy, the labor expert on naval affairs, and other leaders of the party.

Final election returns were received today from Orkney and Shetland, where the seat in parliament was won by Sir Robert Hamilton. Liberal. It made the returns complete from 609 of the 615 seats in parliament. The result of the six outstanding seats will make little difference in the parliamentary lineup.

The standing so far is as follows:

Labor	288
Conservatives	256
Liberal	58
Nationalists	3
Independents	2
Prohibitionists	1
Constitutionalist	1

A majority in parliament is 308 seats, so that Labor is twenty votes short of having control. Lloyd George's Liberals still hold the balance of power. By voting with the Conservatives, they can defeat the Labor government almost at will; by withholding their vote, or giving part of it to Labor, they can continue the MacDonald government in power indefinitely.

The best guess was that Lloyd George would sit back for the present and let Labor demonstrate its intentions. Traditional British fair play demands that MacDonald be given a "sporting chance" to show his wares, and it would be suicidal to defeat him at once. The canny Welshman can afford to wait until he catches the Labor government in a weak position, where a defeat would be accepted by the country as justified.

That probably will come on foreign policy, a ticklish subject on which Labor has pronounced views.

GERMANY AND ALLIES REACH ACCORD ON REPARATIONS

PARIS, June 4.—Germany and the allied creditor nations reached a complete accord today on the reparations problem.

The final obstacle which remained in the way of a complete agreement was removed when Belgium agreed to settle its mark claim against Germany by direct negotiations with Berlin, relieving the conference of the burden of including the special clause in the conference report.

All the delegations, including the Belgian, approved the German proposition, made by note yesterday, that the question of restitution to Belgium for the gold francs confiscated by Germany during the years of occupation be settled by a special conference between the two governments involved. Thereupon the Belgian delegation indicated its willingness to sign the new plan which Owen D. Young, chairman of the conference, was the master mind.

The double cabin cruiser, presumably the one which Colonel Lindbergh purchased shortly before his sudden marriage in England yesterday, was seen lying at anchor about a half mile down the harbor by coast guards today.

It evidently had slipped into the harbor during the night. As soon as coast guards, with the aid of glasses, had distinguished the name "Mouette" on the trim craft's bow, newspaper men arranged to attempt to board the yacht.

Suddenly the figure of a tall man, wearing a white sailor suit, appeared on the Mouette's deck. He put up a flag, weighed anchor, and the cruiser immediately began nosing its way out of the harbor. The entire operation did not require five minutes.

LINDBERGH'S AGAIN FLEE FROM REPORTERS

WOODS HOLE, Mass., June 4.—Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh today was apparently continuing his game of hide-and-seek with newspapermen in an effort to enjoy seclusion during his honeymoon with the former Miss Anne Morrow Lindbergh.

The Mouette, believed to be the Colonel's honeymoon motor yacht, weighed anchor and slipped out of the harbor here shortly after 10:30 a. m. today

CLEVELAND POLICE SHOOT BURGLAR AND PREVENT ROBBERY

Believe Series Of Thefts Is Cleared By Arrest

CLEVELAND, June 4.—Thomas Powers, 28, said by police to be one of two burglars who have entered more than a score of Cleveland drug stores, was shot and probably fatally wounded early today by Patrolman Harry Hughes.

Although refusing to talk, and bearing scars that would identify him as a Detroit man Powers identification was established by Detective John Byrne who said Powers lived here.

Police records show that in 1921 he was sentenced to the Mansfield Reformatory for burglary and larceny. He was caught leaving the Brackland Drug Company here, his companion escaped.

Early this morning police received a call that the McAllister Drug Company was being burglarized.

Officers from two east side precincts started for the scene. Speeding down the street, Patrolman Hughes saw two men in the Brackland store. He slammed on the brakes, yelling for Patrolman Kleinhenz who was with him to get the men. As the two policemen got out, the men fled from the store.

One escaped. The other dodged into an alley by the drug store and circling several houses Hughes came upon the man in the driveway of an apartment house. The patrolman's flashlight showed the man holding a revolver. The patrolman fired and the man fell.

Two other bullet wounds were found on Powers. Doctors said both were at least a month old.

STATE EMPOWERED TO ABANDON CANALS

COLUMBUS, O., June 4.—The decision of the U. S. Supreme Court holding the state is empowered to abandon its antiquated canals and convert them into highways without paying damages to corporations or individuals who own water leases, was seen today as the last step towards complete obliteration of the canals. Projects costing millions of dollars have been held up pending the decision.

FIREMEN CALLED TO CLINIC

CLEVELAND, O., June 4.—Three fire companies rushed to the Cleveland Clinic Hospital today when a fire alarm was sounded from the institution.

Firemen found that grease, spilled on a hot stove in the kitchen, had caused the alarm.

Ten victims of the Cleveland Clinic fire and explosions are in the hospital receiving treatment.

LOSERS HUGE SUIT

WASHINGTON, June 4.—Geo. D. Haskell today lost his $24,000,000 anti-trust damage suit against the estate of the late James B. Duke, tobacco magnate, when the supreme court denied his petition for review of adverse lower court decisions.

CONGRESS CONSIDERS SHORTER RECESS BECAUSE WORK DELAYED

WASHINGTON, June 4.—Congressional plans were revised considerably today in view of the temporary delay on the farm agreement and the decision of the senate finance committee to speed up work on the tariff.

The new plan calls for a two months summer recess instead of three, the recess to begin about June 15 and end about August 15 when the senate will return to sit out the summer in a warm tariff debate.

If possible, the leaders intend to get an agreement to send the tariff bill to the White House for signature not later than November 1.

The farm agreement is now due Thursday, although new disputes over minor features of the bill may delay it beyond that time. Conference representatives of the senate and house are arguing now about the stabilization feature and will not reach the most debatable provision before September.

Open tariff hearings will be begun by sub-committees of the senate finance committee a week from today and will be ended about July 10.

While awaiting for these major subjects of legislation the senate is involved in a sharp fight over the Nye resolution proposing to bring up a repealer of the national origins act. The author of it, Senator Nye, of North Dakota, will finish his speech late today and a vote on the question is expected Wednesday.

The house is occupied with the senate's census and reapportionment bill under a five minute debate limitation rule which will bring a final vote by night. Next will come the Borah bill to license commission merchants.

FORMER TREASURER
BUCKLEY STANDS ON BRINK OF JAIL TERM

Attorneys Fail To Perfect Appeal In Time Limit

CINCINNATI, O., June 4.—Former State Treasurer Bert B. Buckley of Dayton, stood on the brink of imprisonment today with only the federal appeals courts empowered to save him.

Buckley was convicted in Columbus last fall of conspiring to bribe a federal dry agent, and of violating the national prohibition laws. He was sentenced to two and one-half years in Atlanta, fined $1000, then released on bond pending an appeal.

The time limit for the appeal expired May 20, without the appeal being perfected but this was not known until U. S. District Attorney Haveth E. Mau appeared in federal court and filed a motion to have the appeal notice docketed and dismissed.

Appeals Judge Arthur C. Denison set the motion for hearing for Thursday and ordered Buckley's attorneys to appear and show cause, orally, why the motion should not be sustained.

If the motion is sustained, Buckley, now with a Dayton pencil company, must surrender immediately for commitment.

Printed copies of the appeal were filed in the office of the district court clerk here, but they were not certified and the appeal fee was not paid. Thus the former treasurer's attorneys did not perfect the appeal.

To stay the sentence Buckley's lawyers must show that errors prejudicial to their client were made during Buckley's trial and that the conviction was a miscarriage of justice.

The government will be permitted to reply.

THEY'VE GONE AND DONE IT Douglas Fairbanks Jr. And Joan Crawford Stop Denials Long Enough To Marry

NEW YORK, June 4.—Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., and Joan Crawford have been married despite their assertions that they were much too busy making motion pictures to consider matrimony before 1930.

They did it yesterday afternoon in the rectory of St. Malachy's Roman Catholic Church when they were still breathless from issuing denials that they had any intention of marrying while on a brief vacation here from Hollywood studios.

Fairbanks' mother, Beth Sully, the first wife of Douglas Fairbanks, was at the ceremony.

The younger Fairbanks, who is 19 years old, said he had received a telegram from his father, in which parental blessings and congratulations were combined.

The youthful bridegroom added that his two-year love affair with Miss Crawford had been "romantic and a sweet one."

Miss Crawford—she will remain Miss Crawford to motion picture addicts—looking up from a letter she was writing to her mother and smiled. The letter, she said, began, "Dear Mother, it is but an hour since..."

There will be no honeymoon trip at present, it seems, because both of them are much too busy making motion pictures.

EIGHTEEN CARRIED OUT AFTER FLAMES ENVELOP BUILDING

Firemen Halt Blaze Before It Reaches Films; To Probe

CHICAGO, June 4.—Eighteen patients were rescued from the Chicago General Hospital today when fire broke out in the boiler room and spread quickly in the four story building. Firemen, police, physicians and nurses joined in carrying terror-stricken patients from the smoke filled building.

A checkup revealed no one was injured.

The fire was quenched before it reached a quantity of X-ray films on the first floor.

The flames were within ten feet of the explosive film when put out. Fire Marshal Michael Corrigan said he would investigate apparent carelessness with which the films were scattered about.

"If the fire had reached the films, the situation might have been much more serious," Corrigan said, recalling the recent Cleveland hospital disaster. "A lethal gas would have been loosed and probably would have taken a large toll of life."

Corrigan demanded an explanation of the film being exposed in violation of city ordinances from Dr. J. L. Stivak, supervisor of the hospital. The physician said the film was to have been discarded today.

Corrigan said, however, he would call on the city attorney, coroner and police to investigate the film situation.

A half dozen acts of heroism occurred while the patients were being carried to safety.

Joseph Richter, a taxi driver, leaped from his cab, rushed to the second floor and carried out three patients before fire apparatus arrived.

Mrs. Grace Lamprecht, 28, and her week-old baby were among the last to be taken from the hospital.

Day nurses, aroused from sleep by the excitement, aided the night staff in wrapping the patients in blankets and rushing them into the chilly morning air. Some of them were laid out on the lawn while the rest were being rescued.

Cries of the patients reached to the street and motorists and workmen joined in the rescue until firemen and policemen arrived.

Miss Tenni Davis, a night nurse, collapsed after carrying Mrs. Margaret Missner, a helpless patient, to safety. Another woman, too ill to aid herself, was brought down a ladder by the first firemen to reach the scene.

Mrs. Belle Hope, recuperating from an attempted suicide, remarked to a fireman who carried her down a ladder that this was the second time she was being rescued against her will.

VESUVIUS SPOUTS AS VILLAGERS FLEE

NAPLES, Italy, June 4.—Two smoking rivulets of lava from Mt. Vesuvius were flowing down the mountain's sides today, endangering the country and driving inhabitants of Terzigno village from their homes.

Authorities took precautions to relieve the population of the entire mountain side if the lava flow grows worse, and troops were transferred to the area from Portici.

The lava was released when ground about the base of Mt. Vesuvius' cone, inside the volcano's southeastern crater, cracked. It reached the edge of the crater and divided into two rivulets, one of them falling into Vico valley and the other crawling slowly towards Terzigno.

SENTENCE DOCTOR

DAYTON, June 5.—Commitment papers were issued today against Dr. Lloyd Overhulse of Portsmouth who must serve six months in the Scioto County jail on charges of violating the Harrison anti-narcotic act.

Overhulse's sister, Elizabeth, also a physician, will be tried on a similar charge on July 1 at Cincinnati.

HELD FOR MURDER

Mrs. Catherine Cassler, 41, a former leader in the W. C. T. U., who was once sentenced to death for murder, has been grilled by detectives at Valparaiso, Ind., in connection with the slaying of Cameo Soutar, 24, her husband's housekeeper, whose body was found in a swamp near Hebron, Ind. Mrs. Cassler was freed from jail a month ago in a new trial after a two-year imprisonment in connection with the slaying of William Lindstrom, a cabinet maker.

FIND NEW EVIDENCE ACCUSING WOMAN OF MURDER IN INDIANA

Swamp Killer Silently Facing Second Death Trial

VALPARAISO, Ind., June 4.—Fresh evidence in the swamp murder of her husband's mistress was on record today against Mrs. Catherine Cassler, plump matron of 40, behind the bars again a scant month after escaping the gallows.

New witnesses, brought here from Chicago to testify at the coroner's inquest into the murder of Miss Cameo Soutar, butterfly girl of Chicago's south side bright lights, had forged a chain of events linking Mrs. Cassler with the death of her rival for the love of her truck driver-husband, Truman.

Added to the testimony was a letter, written by Mrs. Cassler when the hangman's noose appeared certain to end her life, reappeared after months to add another bit to the accumulation of evidence in the hands of Valparaiso authorities.

Silent as this array confronted her, Mrs. Cassler was scheduled to be the next witness called before Edward Miller, coroner.

To follow her on the witness stand was Edward Cassler, who, Mrs. Cassler said, is her son. Her husband contended Edward was a waif, left on their doorstep when a baby.

Witnesses have traced Miss Soutar, a roller skating champion and actress, into the Cassler home in Chicago last Tuesday, said she entered an automobile with the older woman and Edward and then told of Mrs. Cassler's having been ill on Wednesday and attributing her indisposition to a "long ride."

A wrist watch, which may have belonged to Miss Soutar, was unearthed in the Cassler home and added to the evidence. Also several 32 calibre bullets were found. Dr. Francis J. Kleinman testified the girl was killed by a bullet of that calibre.

CLEVELAND POLICE SHOOT BURGLAR AND PREVENT ROBBERY

Believe Series Of Thefts Is Cleared By Arrest

CLEVELAND, June 4.—Thomas Powers, 28, said by police to be one of two burglars who have entered more than a score of Cleveland drug stores, was shot and probably fatally wounded early today by Patrolman Harry Hughes.

Although refusing to talk, and bearing papers that would identify him as a Detroit man Powers' identification was established by Detective John Byrne who said Powers lived here.

Police records show that in 1921 he was sentenced to the Mansfield Reformatory for burglary and larceny. He was caught leaving the Brackland Drug Company here. His companion escaped.

Early this morning police received a call that the McAllister Drug Company was being burglarized.

Officers from two east side precincts started for the scene. Speeding down the street, Patrolman Hughes saw two men in the Brackland store. He slammed on the brakes, yelling for Patrolman Kleinhenz who was with him to get the men. As the two policemen got out, the men fled from the store.

One escaped. The other dodged into an alley by the drug store with the patrolman pursuing him. After darting across streets and circling several houses Hughes came upon the man in the driveway of an apartment house. The patrolman's flashlight showed the man holding a revolver. The patrolman fired and the man fell.

Two other bullet wounds were found on Powers. Doctors said both were at least a month old.

STATE EMPOWERED TO ABANDON CANALS

COLUMBUS, O., June 4.—The decision of the U. S. Supreme Court holding the state is empowered to abandon its antiquated canals and convert them into highways without paying damages to corporations or individuals holding water leases, was seen today as the last step towards complete obliteration of the canals.

Projects costing millions of dollars have been held up pending the decision.

LINDBERGH'S AGAIN FLEE FROM REPORTERS

WOODS HOLE, Mass., June 4.—Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh today was apparently continuing his game of hide-and-seek with newspapermen in an effort to enjoy seclusion during his honeymoon with the former Miss Anne Morrow.

The Mouette, believed to be the Colonel's honeymoon motor yacht, weighed anchor and slipped out of the harbor here shortly after 10:30 a. m. today

Douglas Fairbanks Jr. And Joan Crawford Stop Denials Long Enough To Marry

CHICAGO, June 4.—Leonard Sacks, secretary to Jack Dempsey, has revealed a series of events which he interpreted as threats against the life of the former heavyweight champion.

Sacks told the United Press he received a threatening telephone call before he left New York and that he was told "You can't get away with it." He intimated that Dempsey himself had been the target of similar messages while in Philadelphia and that they inspired the quick movements which characterized Dempsey's hurried visit to Chicago last week.

Dempsey is now on the west coast, undertaking negotiations which may lead to his return to the ring. Sacks made no reference to any connection between that development and the linking of Dempsey's name to a "death threat." Neither did he draw any comparison to Dempsey's report that he had been fired at while in Florida last winter, a report generally minimized after the first excitement.

Someone called and told me Dempsey is not dealing with Jack Kearns now, he is dealing with somebody else, you can't get away with it," Sacks said.

The call came shortly after Dempsey had broken off promotional interests in New York, the secretary said. Sacks interpreted the call to mean that Dempsey's life was in danger.

"I can't understand it," Sacks commented. "Dempsey was not in New York at the time but I told him about it when he came back. He did not say anything and I didn't know whether to take it as just another call."

The day of the call Dempsey had gone to Wilmington, Del., and had stopped off for luncheon in Philadelphia and there was a report that Jack had received a call or two there, although this could not be verified. Sacks said he was not with Jack at the time so knew nothing of any Philadelphia calls.

Immediately after returning to New York, Jack came to Chicago. He went direct from the train to one hotel, later he was registered at another and still later he entertained a few newspapermen at another. He arrived around 10 a. m. and departed at 6 the same afternoon. Sacks admitted that Dempsey carried a revolver close to him but said "Jack most always does that."

The former heavyweight champion went direct to Kansas City with Sacks from here and took a plane from there to Los Angeles. There he rejoined his wife, Estelle Taylor, motion picture actress.

Sacks returned to Chicago. He did not say whether he had received any calls since coming back to Chicago.

Dempsey last week broke off promotional interests with Humbert Puzay and Edward Cole after he allegedly had received $40,000 as an advance payment for his work.

"Jack was to have been provided a place to promote within sixty days," Sacks said. "The place was not forthcoming when the contract was up on May 25, and Jack figured he was free to do as he pleased."

While awaiting for these major subjects of legislation the senate is involved in a sharp fight over the Nye resolution proposing to bring up a repealer of the national origins provision of the immigration act. The author of it, Senator Nye, of North Dakota, will finish his speech late today and a vote on the question is expected Wednesday.

The house is occupied with the senate's census and reapportionment bill under a five minute debate limitation rule which will bring a final vote by night. Next will come the Borah bill to license commission merchants.

Former State Treasurer Bert B. Buckley of Dayton, stood on the brink of imprisonment today with only the federal appeals courts empowered to save him.

Buckley was convicted in Columbus last fall of conspiring to bribe a federal dry agent, and of violating the national prohibition laws. He was sentenced to two and one-half years in Atlanta, fined $1000, then released on bond pending an appeal.

The time limit for the appeal expired May 20, without the appeal being perfected but this was not known until U. S. District Attorney Haveth E. Mau appeared in federal court and filed a motion to have the appeal notice denied and dismissed.

Appeals Judge Arthur C. Denison set the motion for hearing for Thursday and ordered Buckley's attorneys to appear and show cause, orally, why the motion should not be sustained.

If the motion is sustained, Buckley, now with a Dayton pencil company, must surrender immediately for commitment.

Printed copies of the appeal were filed in the office of the district court clerk here, but they were not certified and the appeal fee was not paid. Thus the former treasurer's attorneys did not perfect the appeal.

To stay the sentence Buckley's lawyers must show that errors prejudicial to their client were made during Buckley's trial and that the conviction was a miscarriage of justice.

The government will be permitted to reply.

Douglas Fairbanks Jr. And Joan Crawford Stop Denials Long Enough To Marry

NEW YORK, June 4.—Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., and Joan Crawford have been married despite their assertions that they were much too busy making motion pictures to consider matrimony before 1930.

They did it yesterday afternoon in the rectory of St. Malachy's Roman Catholic Church when they were still up from a letter she was writing to her mother and smiled. The letter, she said, began, "Dear Mother, it is but an hour since..."

There will be no honeymoon trip at present, it seems, because both of them are much too busy making motion pictures.

The younger Fairbanks, who is 19 years old, said he had received a telegram from his father, in which parental blessings and congratulations were combined.

The youthful bridegroom added that his two-year love affair with Miss Crawford had been "romantic and a sweet one."

EIGHTEEN CARRIED OUT AFTER FLAMES ENVELOP BUILDING

Firemen Halt Blaze Before It Reaches Films; To Probe

CHICAGO, June 4.—Eighteen patients were rescued from the Chicago General Hospital today when fire broke out in the boiler room and spread quickly in the four story building. Firemen, police, physicians and nurses joined in carrying terror stricken patients from the smoke filled building.

A checkup revealed no one was injured.

The fire was quenched before it reached a quantity of X-ray films on the first floor.

The flames were within ten feet of the explosive film when put out. Fire Marshal Michael Corrigan said he would investigate apparent carelessness with which the films were scattered about.

If the fire had reached the films, the situation might have been much more serious," Corrigan said, recalling the recent Cleveland hospital disaster. "A lethal gas would have been loosed and probably would have taken a large toll of life."

Corrigan demanded an explanation of the film being exposed in violation of city ordinances from Dr. J. L. Stivak, supervisor of the hospital. The physician said the film was to have been discarded today.

Corrigan said, however, he would call on the city attorney, coroner and police to investigate the film situation.

A half dozen acts of heroism occurred while the patients were being carried to safety.

Joseph Richter, taxi driver, leaped from his cab, rushed to the second floor and carried out three patients before fire apparatus arrived.

Mrs. Grace Lamprecht, 28, and her week-old baby were among the last to be taken from the hospital. They nurses, aroused down the stairs by the excitement, aided the night staff in wrapping the patients in blankets and rushing them into the chilly morning air. Some of them were laid out on the lawn while the rest were being rescued.

Cries of the patients reached to the street and motorists and workmen joined in the rescue until firemen and policemen arrived.

Miss Tenni Davis, a night nurse, collapsed after carrying Mrs. Margaret Miesner, a helpless patient, to safety. Another woman, too ill to aid herself, was brought down a ladder by the first firemen to reach the scene.

Mrs. Belle Hope, recuperating from an attempted suicide, remarked to a friend that this was the second time she was being rescued against her will.

VESUVIUS SPOUTS AS VILLAGERS FLEE

NAPLES, Italy, June 4.—Two smoking rivulets of lava from Mt. Vesuvius were flowing down the mountain's sides today, endangering the country and driving inhabitants of Terzigno village from their homes.

Authorities took precautions to relieve the population of the entire mountain side if the lava flow grows worse, and troops were transferred to the area from Portici.

The lava was released when ground about the base of Mt. Vesuvius' cone, inside the volcano's southeastern crater, cracked. It reached the edge of the crater and divided into two rivulets, one of them falling into Vico valley and the other crawling slowly towards Terzigno.

SENTENCE DOCTOR

DAYTON, June 5.—Commitment papers were issued today against Dr. Lloyd Overhulse of Portsmouth who must serve six months in the Scioto County Jail on charges of violating the Harrison anti-narcotic act.

Overhulse's sister, Elizabeth, 31, so a physician, will be tried on a similar charge on July 1 at Cincinnati.

Following a custom inaugurated several years ago, THE EVENING GAZETTE will be published at noon every Wednesday during June, July and August, to allow employees a weekly half-holiday.

The schedule of closing adopted by the Xenia Retail Merchants Association will be followed, beginning Wednesday, June 5. Both afternoon editions will be published at noon, there being no change in the time of publication of the morning paper.

CIVIC CLUBS PLAN COMMUNITY FOURTH OF JULY CELEBRATION

Kiwanis and Rotary Clubs have definitely decided to sponsor a movement for a community Fourth of July celebration in Shawnee Park. It is announced.

ESTATE VALUED

Gross value of the estate of Louis F. Hoog, deceased, is placed at $6,810 in an estimate on file in Probate Court. Debts and cost of administration amount to $2,653, leaving a net value of $4,157.

HEARING FIXED

Application seeking to admit to probate the last will of Thomas Finn, late of Miami Twp., has been assigned for a hearing in Probate Court at 2:30 p. m. June 4.

When your child is sleepless.

This remedy rarely fails.

Constipation is a common cause of sleeplessness, both in children and adults. When a child is wakeful and fretful, see if tongue is coated; this is a sure sign the stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with sour, irritating waste. Simply give a dose of "California Fig Syrup," and in a few hours all the sour bile and fermenting food passes out of the bowels, and you have no more anxiety over the child's excitability and wakefulness at night. Children love this harmless "fruity" laxative. It banishes biliousness and constipation, regulates the bowels and insures pure blood, a clear complexion, joyous spirits, a keen brain, healthy appetite and helps to build a strong constitution. See that the Fig Syrup you buy bears the name "California," so you won't be imposed on by imitators. —Adv.

worked out by a committee appointed by each club which will hold a joint meeting Tuesday night. The celebration may be an all-day affair and will probably include two softball games at Cox Memorial Athletic Field in the afternoon and dancing for the young folks in the park pavilion in the evening. Refreshments will be served in the park and it is planned to provide diversified entertainment as an inducement for Xenians to spend the holiday at home.

WILL STAND TRIAL ON LIQUOR CHARGE

Harry Spencer, Jasper Ave., will be tried in Probate Court at 9 a. m. Saturday, June 8 on a charge of selling liquor. Arraigned before Judge S. C. Wright, Spencer pleaded not guilty to this charge but entered a guilty plea to possessing liquor. Sentence on this charge was deferred by the court pending the outcome of the trial Saturday.

Spencer was released on $600 appearance bond. He was arrested following an early morning raid on his home in which county authorities reported they found two half-pints of liquor.

Police records reveal that Spencer was fined $50 and costs on charges of intoxication and disorderly conduct by Mayor Karl R. Babb, May 20 for his part in a cutting and shooting scrape at his residence.

Do Daydreams Ever Come True?

"I wish I could get up in the sky, all to myself and take my cares and worries and dump them all overboard."

JUST as a sunny face and radiant smile draw happiness and love, Vivian's face, reflecting her pensive thoughts, was one that sometimes drew an indifferent glance and that was about all.

For few there were in the small town who didn't know the story of Vivian Matthews and that twenty years before she had been left on the doorstep of little old Martha Matthews, spinster.

She was a little nobody. No one paid much attention to her except Cubby Sullivan, a chubby, red-headed, wise-cracking boy she had known all her life. But he was only the boy next door. It wasn't romantic.

"Viv, you're a red-head with a brunette heart. Us red-heads got to live up to our hair. Darling, maybe you're lucky not knowing who you are. You might be the daughter of a radio announcer or a mammy singer." That's what Cubby told her.

Who would have thought that finally Vivian Matthews, known all her life as "The Flat Tire," would some day see her dreams come true—and have the most wonderful romance a girl ever had—and that in an airplane flying under the blue vaulted heavens she would soar to happiness?

I. G. A. MEMBERS AT XENIA DINNER HEAR CHICAGO MAN SPEAK

Rapid growth of the Independent Grocers Alliance since it was organized two years ago to combat chain store competition was stressed by Gene Flack, Chicago, Ill., representative of the national advertising division of the association, in an address before nearly 250 retail grocers and their employees of the Xenia district of the alliance, who attended a dinner-meeting at the Masonic Temple Monday night.

Explaining a plan designed to stimulate greater interest in the new organization, Mr. Flack pointed to the progress made within the last two years, stressing the fact the organization now boasts member stores in forty states and that the present membership comprises approximately 10,000 retail grocers.

In the Xenia district alone the I. G. A. has more than 150 members.

Many nearby cities in this district, including Urbana, Springfield, Dayton, Middletown, Wilmington, Washington C. H. and Circleville were represented at the banquet.

The Eavey Co., Xenia wholesale grocers, played host to the visitors and a talk was also made by H. E. Eavey, president of the local firm. The dinner was served by Jacob Kany.

CORONER TO PROBE DEATH OF XENIAN

Coroner Frank M. Chambliss plans to hold an inquest to determine if the death of John F. Stewart, 57, at his home, 914 E. Second St., at 11:30 p. m. Monday, was due, as authorities believe, to acute alcoholism.

Stewart was found dead in his room and Coroner Chambliss expects to analyze a small quantity of liquor found on the premises on the theory it contained poison.

Stewart who was born July 15, 1871, lived in Xenia practically all of his life and for thirty years was employed by John Barnett.

He leaves a brother, Thomas, this city, and a sister, Mrs. Anna M. Booker, Dayton.

Brief funeral services will be held at the Johnson funeral parlors at 2 p. m. Thursday in charge of the Rev. A. M. Howe. Burial will be made in Cherry Grove Cemetery.

CLEAR DISTINCTIONS — Then shall ye return, and discern between the righteous and the wicked, between him that serveth God and him that serveth him not.—Malachi 3:18.

STAMP ISSUE TO HONOR EDISON

The Light's Golden Jubilee two cent stamp to be issued early in June by the United States Government in honor of Thomas Alva Edison and the fiftieth anniversary of his perfection of the incandescent lamp, to be celebrated this year by Light's Golden Jubilee, will be the latest addition to the series of stamps issued by our government, to commemorate various events significant in the country's history.

The first commemorative series ever issued by the United States was in celebration of the discovery of America. It was known as the Columbian issue, was dated 1892, in honor of the four hundredth anniversary of when "Columbus sailed the ocean blue," but did not appear until 1893, when the Chicago Exposition which it was also to mark, was opened. It consisted of a full series of stamps depicting scenes in the life of Columbus, and is most amusingly remembered for the fact that the one cent stamp, "Columbus in sight of land," shows the hero clean-shaven, while the two cent stamp, "Columbus in the act of landing," depicts him with a full beard. So swiftly did events move in those days!

To a person following the commemorative series of stamps issued by the government, the history of the country lies plainly revealed, more graphically than in the ordinary history books. For there follow in swift succession many issues.

In May, 1927, occurred an event that startled the world. Charles A. Lindbergh, alone, in his plane, flew over the ocean and landed in Paris. As part of the tribute of praise, Congress passed a law for the issuance of a special Lindbergh stamp, which was the first that had ever been issued in honor of a living man. This precedent is now being followed in the case of Thomas Alva Edison, whose signal achievement fifty years ago, in perfecting the incandescent lamp, is similarly being marked and honored by a special commemorative stamp issue. In both cases the likeness of the man does not appear on the stamp, in accordance with a ruling that no living man in the country is so to be honored, but in both cases, stamps are a witness to the honor and regard in which the subject is held by a grateful nation. The Light's Golden Jubilee stamp shows an electric light illuminating the world.

The general custom for commemorative stamps has been to have a limited quantity issued, which are placed on sale until the supply is exhausted. The Light's Golden Jubilee stamp will be placed on sale at Menlo Park, New Jersey, soon so that, most fittingly, the scenes of the early labors and triumphs of Edison, may also be the scene of the first of the honors to be paid him on the fiftieth anniversary of his invention to be celebrated throughout the nation by Light's Golden Jubilee, culminating October 21.

CRIME IS OLD

A letter published in London in 1277 says: "Street robberies were never known to be greater than they are at present." We think of the crime wave as a modern institution.

HAS ITS ADVANTAGES

Travelers tell us that sometimes the wives of an African tribesman go on strike. They refuse to feed him until he "comes to time" or accedes to some request or other. After all, monogamy has its distinctly good points. It provides a domestic situation, which, if not always easy to handle, is at least considerably simplified.

RESPONSIBILITY

Compared with Great Britain the United States hardly knows what national responsibility is. While the white population of the British Empire is 60,000,000, the number of its native race subjects is 400,000,000. There can be no heavier national burden than the responsibility of governing millions of men and women of other races, other habits, and other ideals.

DUNKING

The editor of a well-known western paper not long ago gave an address, repeated in movie-theaters, on the subject of "Dunking." Folks who dip their doughnuts in their coffee are dunkers. But dunking has a long and not dishonorable history. It goes far back into the far reaches of tradition. Our good old-fashioned word "supper" was derived from the practice of sopping bread in gravy.

STORIES

Blueberries seven-eighths of an inch in diameter having been grown in New Jersey, the Jersey mosquito must give way to the blueberry tradition.

INDIA

Katherine Mayo, who wrote the smashing book called "Mother India," has been criticised because it is said she presents but one side of the picture of that land. But she has doubtless performed a great service for a benighted country in bringing it anew to the attention of a supposedly civilized world. At any rate there is something wrong with any country in which there are two and a half million married women under ten years of age.

BALLOONS

Much interest in balloon racing. But balloons are not at all new. In 1863 "Le Geant" was the name of a balloon which had a bag of 450,000 cubic feet. It was capable of lifting 40 passengers.

The question of payments under the Dawes Plan was entirely unsettled in that no limit was fixed for the number of years that the payments might be made. The amount of money to be paid to all Europe was tentative, although the total of American claims were fixed. The experts meeting was called for the purpose of recommending the entire amount which Germany was to pay to the Allies within the recognized power of Germany to pay.

From reports emanating from Europe, it appeared that the experts were about to reach an agreement and that therefore the annual payments to be made to the Allies and the United States. In other words, the pot is going to be smaller but the percentage of the pot going to each country is going to remain the same. The general feeling of the administration is that if the other

THE COLLEGE OF HARD KNOCKS!

How to Achieve Beauty

BY MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

To be smart you must groom and groom! If this sounds like something that stablemen do to horses—never mind. It is. But it is also something that smart and lovely women do to keep their personal appearance always perfect.

It means taking care of every last detail to make sure that it is right and finished-looking. No loose end dangling when they're not supposed to dangle. No ragged edges where a ragged edge is not supposed to be. No suggestion of dust stains or grime anywhere. (Horror!) Not a heel run over or a shoe uncleaned or a fingernail left unpainted! Everything just as you would have it if you had all the time in the world to dress and a full-length mirror under bright sunlight to help you to criticize yourself.

The care of your hair is one foremost consideration in good grooming. A sleek, smooth shining head of healthy hair, well dressed, is or should be every woman's aim for smartness.

Keeping hair healthy and lovely, amenable to a becoming hairdress is one thing. It means proper shampooing and brushing. But keeping it well-groomed and smart means this and something more. It means frequent trimming — if you wear your hair short—and a fashionable becoming style of coiffure whether you wear it long or short.

The smartest types of coiffure today are simple, the hair following the outline of the head closely, revealing its natural contour. This matter of outline is most important in hair dressing, just as it is in clothes—the silhouette again—and you must study it.

Face yourself in the mirror and study your full-face contour; then your profile. Now drape your hair to fit this contour closely or to improve upon it. If your head is too flat in back, push your hair out slightly there. If your hair is long, wear your clipper or knot in the most becoming place—low on your neck, for the evening, if your profile suggests it, or higher, just at the base of your head, if your nose needs a curve here to balance it.

Perhaps your face needs the softening effect of waved hair. If it does keep your hair smoothly waved, always. But let the waves be wide and flat, not narrow and frizzy looking.

The Lenroot case has been a painful affair all around—except for the folk responsible for shooting secrecy full of holes.

In olden days maybe a too-talkative senator or two would have been expelled. Maybe a newspaper man or so would have gone to jail for contempt.

In these degenerate times all the culprits got was a lot of favorable publicity. Secrecy's champions got themselves laughed at. Several exalted personages were placed in a highly embarrassing position.

And there was about as much secrecy connected with it as there was at the last D. A. R. convention's debate of Mrs. Helen Tufts Baile's appeal, when the Daughters threw all the reporters out—hard for to turn off their radio equipment—and broadcast their entire proceedings to the whole wide world.

If the senate had taken up the Lenroot appointment in open session, a few speeches would have been made in opposition to it and 25 or 30 votes would have been cast against it—but it would have been confirmed, as it was anyway.

And that would have ended the matter—an incident of half an afternoon.

However, it was pulled off behind closed doors. The correspondents got hold of it, as they always do—and the vote was published.

Even that would not have mattered much—but the pro-secrecy crowd chose to yell about the "leak." That brought the story out in all its details—and made a two weeks' sensation of it.

Some senators appear to have opposed ex-Senator Lenroot because he has been associated with the power industry. Not very much for the power industry, that—the implication that any association with it damns a man forevermore.

Other senators complain that Lenroot was helpful to Mr. Hoover at Kansas City—and now Mr. Hoover gives him a $12,000 federal job. A linking up of ideas which is calculated to make Mr. Hoover sore.

Ex-Senator Lenroot in the spotlight as presidential appointee who was mercilessly panned by his former colleagues on the senate floor—not particularly pleasant for him.

The fact is, secret sessions of the senate are out of date.

They were certain to wind up in a row, if a few back-number senators persisted in hanging onto them too long—which is exactly what they did.

They are about done for now—if not quite.

Wise senators have discovered that they are risky—and that means that there will be big majorities against them henceforward—except very semi-occasional when, as Vice President Curtis suggests, there is some mighty good excuse.

Household Hints

BY MRS. MARY MORTON

MENU HINT
Broiled Steak
Creamed New Potatoes
Fried Cabbage
Carrots with Mayonnaise
Sponge Cake with Strawberries
Coffee

If you use the oven to broil the steak, the potatoes might be scrubbed and baked, then eaten with their skins instead of creaming. Both cabbage and carrots are served in an unusual way. Amounts are for two.

Today's Recipes
Fried Cabbage—Wash and shred small cabbage. Fry in small amount fat, covering tightly and stirring occasionally. Allow 20 minutes over slow fire. Sprinkle with caraway and serve.

Carrots with Mayonnaise—Cook good-sized carrots whole, and when tender make small cups and fill with chopped carrot moistened with mayonnaise. Slice the smallest ends around the edge of a small platter and garnish with small spoonfuls of mayonnaise. Dust with black and red pepper.

Suggestions

Keeping Shoes Clean—Different types of shoes need different treatment. Frequent brushing with a bristle brush, supplemented by an occasional application of liquid dressing, will keep suede shoes looking trim, while the heavier kinds of leather footwear require an occasional soap and water washing to remove spots and stains that a "shine" will not cover. A shoe manufacturer recently advanced the explanation that occasional washing is also necessary to prevent the surface cracks which sometimes develop in apparently sturdy leather shoes from the effects of shoe polish on the leather. If the soapsuds are not rinsed off, he maintained, they will help to keep the leather soft and pliant.

Care of Refrigerator—Whether you have an electric, gas or ice refrigerator one rule holds good for all and this is it must be kept scrupulously clean. This means if food is spilled it should be wiped up immediately, even if it is just a few drops of milk. Never leave such traces of food for the regular cleaning.

Once a week remove the shelves, wash them and do not return until they are thoroughly cooled. Do not use hot water in the food compartment. Just wash this with cold water to which has been added a liberal amount of baking soda and wipe with a clean cloth. If it is an ice refrigerator the ice compartment must be thoroughly cleaned each week.

Diet and Health

BY LULU HUNT PETERS, M.D., AUTHOR OF "DIET AND HEALTH" AND "DIET FOR CHILDREN"

A short time ago, one of the readers wrote that her son, who was working his way through school by playing the cornet, was told that he would weaken his lungs and he might contract tuberculosis. I answered that I had never heard or read of any harmful effects from the playing of wind instruments. My own idea was that it would strengthen the lungs, rather than weaken them.

In today's mail I have a letter from a teacher of the cornet, confirming my idea and giving some further points of view on the subject. The following is his letter:

"As a teacher of some 35 years' experience, I want to say something about the playing of brass instruments. Today these are played by the non-pressure system, which requires very little force; but even with the old method of forcible blowing there is absolutely no danger of contracting any lung trouble. Possibly a little pharyngeal soreness may occur in beginners. But here is an important point: students should not allow others to use their instruments, and they should also boil and thoroughly cleanse the mouth pieces of all cornets, trombones, clarinets, etc. The reed of the clarinet and the mouthpiece should always be wiped after playing. There is danger of infection from pyorrhea or trench mouth and possibly tuberculosis if others use the instrument.

"MR. H."
Thank you for writing, Mr. H. You are a good health teacher.

"About two months ago I was a victim of scarlet fever, and now my hair is coming out more than usual. Some folks have informed me that I might lose it all and in its place grow curly hair. Is there anything to this?" E."

It's a well known experience that after any illness with fever of any duration, the hair falls out, within a few weeks or a few months. This is usually temporary and the hair comes in again.

We have all heard of straight hair coming in curly after a fever, or even of a different color. I know one girl, who was in the American Red Cross with us, doing post-war work in the Balkans, whose hair came in curly where it had been straight before after having typhus fever. I don't know the reason for this. In the histology of the hair (the microscopical structure), the straight hair is oval or round and the curly is flattened somewhat (you know how a shaving curls because it is flat), and the hair follicle in the curly type, it is oblique. (The hair follicle is the little pore or depression in the skin in which the hair has its base). Probably the curvature of the follicle has something to do with flattening the hair so it curls.

Now apparently those born with curly hair have inherited these curly hair follicles. I can't see how a fever would either change or flatten the hair, and it may be possible that these people who say their hair comes in curly when it was straight before, might have had a tendency to curl before, but not enough so it was noticeable. There are a lot of people who do not think of their hair as curly, but who can easily wave it, and the short hairs along the face do curl.

We have an article on the care of the hair and scalp which you may have by following column rules.

Living and Loving

BY MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

Don't be afraid to take your fair share of the blame when things go wrong as well as the credit when things go right. These people who are always in the right and who always put you in the wrong are pests. Don't be one of them.

If it WAS your fault that you were late to the play or missed the train or let the milk spoil or burnt the cake, say so, and say you're sorry. Don't spend a lot of valuable time arguing your way out of it. If you remember that, your matrimonial bark will have fairer sailing, young folks.

"DEAR VIRGINIA LEE: I have been reading your column for some time and it is very much of a help to me and also to my girl friends. I am 14 years old and have been going with a boy three years my senior for somewhat over a year. We love one another dearly. My parents object, although they haven't a thing against him. About two weeks ago we decided to go out of the state soon and get married and not let it be known for awhile yet. I feel as if I could be well satisfied with him. I would like very much to have some of your advice on this."

"BLUE EYED BLONDIE."
I wonder what I can say to make you decide to take the advice, dear. It is, of course, not to get married. A young woman who was married at about your age, or a year older, wrote me the other day. She was so unhappy. Her husband gambled the money away and said he did not love her any more and she had three little children. I am not saying, of course, that your boy friend would do that, but boys and girls in their teens DO change so, and either of you might come to a time when you felt you had changed and had no love for the other. And the man has the responsibility of supporting the family, you know. And when men marry so young they get

Peter's Adventures

BY FLORENCE VINCENT

WHITE EMBLEM OF CRUELTY

Peter was downright determined to make friends with White Heron, to remove the fear from the poor bird's heart if he could.

"Wild Gander and I have had some merry adventures together, and when he told me how beautiful you were I could scarcely wait to get here to see you," said Peter.

"My home is in the Northland, far away from the Southland swamps; but I never minded the long journey about getting back again. All I could think about was you, and so here I am."

"Do give me a chance, White Heron, to prove that there is one Two-Legs in the world that will love you for yourself alone—a Two-Legs who can admire your wonderful plumes without wanting to rob you of them. Do, let's be friends, White Heron! There are so many things I want you to tell me. I am sure we can have many happy hours together if only you will trust me."

Not a word had White Heron replied to Wild Gander, Mrs. Goose or Tommy G-sling, but when the bird spoke to him so kindly and pleaded for his friendship, he could hardly help his heart no longer.

Slowly the beautiful bird raised his head and gave Peter a long searching look. Then he stepped nearer and lifted one long, slender leg, and the boy, used by now to bird manners, shook it gently.

"I am going to do something I never expected to," declared White Heron, after this greeting was over. "I am going to trust a Two-Legs and take him for my friend. What would my poor, dear wives say, I wonder, if they could know it. They would doubtless think I had gone crazy. I who have declared over and over again that I would fly to the ends of the earth, rather than meet one face to face."

"I wish I could say as much for the rest of my race, but you have nothing to fear from me," declared the boy, and now he dared pat White Heron on the shoulder. "But I believe if only my people could know you as you really are and realize how sadly you mourn the loss of your dear ones, they would swear never to steal another plume."

"I am sure I hope so," remarked White Heron, in a hopeless sort of way. "But I am told that the ladies of Heron plumes are very fond of Heron plumes and wear them on their heads. If they only knew it every plume they wear is a 'white badge of cruelty'."

THE COLLEGE OF HARD KNOCKS!

How to Achieve Beauty

BY MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

To be smart you must groom and groom! If this sounds like something that stablemen do to horses—never mind. It is. But it is also something that smart and lovely women do to keep their personal appearance always perfect.

It means taking care of every last detail to make sure that it is right and finished-looking. No loose ends dangling when they're not supposed to dangle. No ragged edges where a ragged edge is not supposed to be. No suggestion of dust stains or grime anywhere. (Horror!) Not a heel run over or a shoe uncleaned or a fingernail left unpolished! Everything just as you would have it if you had all the time in the world to dress and a full-length mirror under bright sunlight to help you to criticize yourself.

The care of your hair is one foremost consideration in good grooming. A sleek, smooth shining head of healthy hair, well dressed, is or should be, every woman's aim for smartness.

Keeping hair healthy and lovely, amenable to a becoming hairdress is one thing. It means proper shampooing and brushing. But keeping it well-groomed and smart means

Behind the Scenes in Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON.—Speaking out of 20 years' experience as a United States senator—but not speaking in any sense as the senate's presiding officer, whose duty it is to preside and say nothing—Vice President Charles Curtis remarks:

"Nine times in ten—yes, 99 times in 100—there is no good excuse for a secret senate session."

"I always voted against secrecy. 'I can imagine it as desirable in a very unusual emergency—for instance, in considering some treaty calling for highly confidential discussion. Yet the senate has acted secretly on treaty after treaty which might just as well have been acted on with all publicity."

"Or suppose the appointment to office of a man with a dark spot in his past—an almost forgotten error that he had atoned for and lived down. Would it not be charitable to remind the senate of it behind closed doors?—to spare him as far as possible in deciding the question of his confirmation."

"The rules committee should settle such cases on their individual merits."

"In general, there is no more reason for secret sessions than there would be for us to take the tunnel—it would be far sensible route in very bad weather—from the senate office building to the capitol, instead of walking across the park in the sunshine on this pleasant forenoon."

Which was precisely what we were doing at the time.

That there will be much discussion of the matter—

countries consented to reduction, the pot being the same, the United States could do no less than accept reduction also.

The United States has been receiving claims under two categories, 1. Payments for the maintenance of the American Army of Occupation. 2. Mixed claims for payment to private citizens of the United States.

Other senators complain that Lenroot was helpful to Mr. Hoover at Kansas City—and now Mr. Hoover gives him a $12,000 federal job. A linking up of ideas which is calculated to make Mr. Hoover sore.

Ex-Senator Lenroot in the spotlight as presidential appointee who was mercilessly panned by his former colleagues on the senate floor!—not particularly pleasant for him.

The fact is, secret sessions of the senate are out of date.

They were certain to wind up in a row, if a few back-number senators persisted in hanging onto them too long—which is exactly what they did.

They are about done for now—if not quite.

Wise senators have discovered that they are risky—and that means that there will be big majorities against them hereafter—except very semi-occasional when, as Vice President Curtis suggests, there is some mighty good excuse.

Household Hints

BY MRS. MARY MORTON

MENU HINT
Broiled Steak
Creamed New Potatoes
Fried Cabbage
Carrots with Mayonnaise
Sponge Cake with Strawberries
Coffee

If you use the oven to broil the steak, the potatoes might be scrubbed and baked, then eaten with their skins instead of creaming. Both cabbage and carrots are served in an unusual way. Amounts are for two.

Today's Recipes
Fried Cabbage—Wash and shred small cabbage. Fry in small amount fat, covering tightly and stirring occasionally. Allow 20 minutes over slow fire. Sprinkle with caraway and serve.

Carrots with Mayonnaise—Cook good-sized carrots whole, and when tender make small cups and fill with chopped carrot, moistened with mayonnaise. Slice the smallest ends around the edge of a small platter and garnish with small spoonfuls of mayonnaise. Dust with black and red pepper.

Suggestions

Keeping Shoes Clean—Different types of shoes need different treatment. Frequent brushing with a bristle brush, supplemented by an occasional application of liquid dressing, will keep suede shoes looking trim, while the heavier kinds of leather footwear require an occasional soap and water washing to remove spots and stains that a "shine" will not cover. A shoe manufacturer recently advanced the explanation that occasional washing is also necessary to prevent the surface cracks which sometimes develop in apparently sturdy leather shoes from the effects of shoe polish on the leather. If the soles are not runned off, he maintained, they will help to keep the leather soft and pliant.

Care of Refrigerator—Whether you have an electric, gas or ice refrigerator one rule holds good for all and this is it must be kept scrupulously clean. This means if food is spilled it should be wiped up immediately, even if it is just a few drops of milk. Never leave such traces of food for the regular cleaning.

Once a week remove the shelves, wash them and do not return until they are thoroughly cooled. Do not use hot water in the food compartment. Just wash this with cold water to which has been added a liberal amount of baking soda and wipe with a clean cloth. If it is an ice refrigerator the ice compartment must be thoroughly cleaned each week.

Diet and Health

BY LULU HUNT PETERS, M.D., AUTHOR OF "DIET AND HEALTH" AND "DIET FOR CHILDREN"

A short time ago, one of the readers wrote that her son, who was working his way through school by playing the cornet, was told that he would weaken his lungs and he might contract tuberculosis. I answered that I had never heard or read of any harmful effects from the playing of wind instruments. My own idea was that it would strengthen the lungs, rather than weaken them.

In today's mail I have a letter from a teacher of the cornet, confirming my idea and giving some further points of view on the subject. The following is his letter:

"As a teacher of some 35 years' experience, I want to say something about the playing of brass instruments. Today these are played by the non-pressure system, which requires very little force; but even with the old method of forcible blowing there is absolutely no danger of contracting any lung trouble. Possibly a little pharyngeal soreness may occur in beginners. But here is an important point: students should not allow others to use their instruments, and they should also boil and thoroughly cleanse the mouth pieces of all cornets, trombones, clarinets, etc. The reed of the clarinet and the mouthpiece should always be wiped after playing. There is danger of infection from pyorrhea or trench mouth and possibly tuberculosis if others use the instrument."

Now apparently those born with curly hair have inherited these curly hair follicles. I can't see how a fever would either change or flatten the hair, and it may be possible that these people who say their hair comes in curly when it was straight before, might have had a tendency to curl before, but not enough so it was noticeable. There are a lot of people who do not think of their hair as curly, but who can easily wave it, and the short hairs along the face do curl.

We have an article on the care of the hair and scalp which you may have by following column rules.

"MR. H."

Thank you for writing, Mr. H. You are a good health teacher.

"About two months ago I was a victim of scarlet fever, and now my hair is coming out more than usual. Some folks have informed me that I might lose it all and in its place grow curly hair. Is there anything to this?" E.

It's a well known experience that after any illness with fever of any duration, the hair falls out, within a few weeks or a few months. This is usually temporary and the hair comes in again.

Living and Loving

BY MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

Don't be afraid to take your fair share of the blame when things go wrong as well as the credit when things go right. These people who are always in the right and who always put you in the wrong are pests. Don't be one of them.

If it WAS your fault that you were late to the play or missed the train or let the milk spoil or burnt the cake, say so, and say you're sorry. Don't spend a lot of valuable time arguing your way out of it. If you remember that, your matrimonial bark will have fairer sailing, young folks.

"DEAR VIRGINIA LEE: I have been reading your column for some time and it is very much of a help to me and also to my girl friends. I am 14 years old and have been going with a boy three years my senior for somewhat over a year. We love one another dearly. My parents object, although they haven't a thing against him. About two weeks ago we decided to go out of the state soon and get married and not let it be known for awhile yet. I feel as if I could be well satisfied with him. I would like very much to have some of your advice on this."

I wonder what I can say to make you decide to take the advice, dear. It is, of course, not to get married. A young woman who was married at about your age, or a year older, wrote me the other day. She was so unhappy. Her husband gambled the money away and said he did not love her any more and she had three little children. I am not saying of course, that your boy friend would do that, but boys and girls in your teens DO change so, and either of you might come to a time when you felt you had changed and had no love for the other. And the man has the responsibility of supporting the family, you know. And when men marry so young they get SALLY: No, don't invite a boy to accompany you to a party if you hardly know him and don't know if he knows who you are. Take your brother or some boy you have known for a long time or one who has shown some interest in you.

Peter's Adventures

BY MRS. FLORENCE SMITH VINCENT

WHITE EMBLEM OF CRUELTY

Peter was downright determined to make friends with White Heron, to remove the fear from the poor bird's heart if he could.

"Wild Gander and I have had some merry adventures together, and when he told me how beautiful you were I could scarcely wait to get here to see you," said Peter.

"My home is in the Northland, far away from the Southern swamps; but I never minded the long journey nor the cold, nor even worried about getting back again. All I could think about was you, and so here I am."

"Do give me a chance, White Heron, to prove that there is one Two-Legs in the world that will love you for yourself alone—a Two-Legs who can admire your wonderful plumes without wanting to rob you of them. Do, let's be friends, White Heron! There are so many things I want you to tell me. I am sure we can have many happy hours together if only you will trust me."

Not a word said White Heron replied to Wild Gander. Mrs. Goose or Tommy Gsling, but when the boy spoke to him so kindly and pleaded for his friendship, he could hardly harden his heart no longer.

Slowly the beautiful bird raised his head and gave Peter a long searching look. Then he stepped nearer and lifted one long, slender leg, and the boy, used by now to bird manners, shook it gently, as if he were going to do something never expected to," declared White Heron, after this greeting was over. "I am going to trust a Two-Legs and take him for my friend. What would my poor, dear wives say, I wonder, if they could know it. They would doubtless think I had gone crazy. I who have declared over and over again that I would fly to the ends of the earth, rather than meet one face to face."

"I wish I could say as much for the rest of my race, but you have nothing to fear from me," declared the boy, and now he dared pat White Heron on the shoulder. "But I believe if only my people could know you as you really are and realize how sadly you mourn the loss of your dear ones, they would swear never to steal another plume."

"I am sure I hope so," remarked White Heron, in a hopeless sort of way. "But I am told the ladies of your race are very fond of Heron plumes and wear them on their heads. If they only knew it every plume they wear is a 'white badge of cruelty'."

"If it will not make you feel too badly you tell me how the hunters of my race rob you? How do they find you Heron? Way down here in the swamps?" The boy was curious.

Next: "No Place Like Home to Heron."

SPORT SNAP SHOTS

FRAMED

Rumors are current, at least there are such reports from the East, that the athletic relations between Princeton and Harvard will be renewed in 1931.

One of the most interesting features of the reports is that Harvard, the school which really caused the break several years ago, is making the overtures for the same.

The Harvard Crimson, the school's undergraduate paper, in a recent issue, discusses the subject at some length and says that the present childish attitude of the two colleges toward frank and open relations where such would be desirable cannot help but be condemned by persons of logical mind.

The Harvard Alumni Bulletin adds this bit: "If Princeton and Harvard men want their athletic teams to meet, the result doubtless will be brought about in time, but it seems pretty plain that the two colleges, having made up their schedules, cannot play football together in 1929 or 1930. We have no knowledge on the subject, but it may well be that the Princeton and Harvard athletic authorities are already discussing the possibilities of a match after 1930."

After a long period of peace, the biggest upheaval which the Western Conference has ever known and which had evidently been brewing for some time finally broke loose with the dropping of Iowa from the ranks of the Big Ten.

It is the belief or rather hope, however, that all in all, the scandals, charges and disputes that followed and will probably continue to arise for some little time to come, will not be altogether an ill wind and that the conference teams will be brought to a new realization of the standard of ethics that must be observed. If not, more punishments will assuredly follow.

COLD KEEPS RUTH FROM PLAYING BALL

NEW YORK, June 4.—Babe Ruth will be out of the New York Yankees lineup for the next several days, possibly a week, because of a heavy cold which showed indications of developing into influenza.

The babe was taken out of the game in the ninth inning last Saturday, when the Yankees were playing the Chicago White Sox. He has not played since. Ruth reported at Yankee stadium yesterday but was ordered to St. Vincent's Hospital for an examination which was said to have disclosed considerable congestion in his chest. He was permitted to go to his home but was told to remain in bed.

DREAD NEURITIS YIELDS QUICKLY TO NEW KONJOLA

Pains Forced Him To Lay Off Work For Two Weeks At A Time; Stomach Trouble Also Ended

"After the remarkable manner in which Konjola benefited me, I feel that it is my duty to endorse it to all who suffer," said Mr. J. R. Wood, R. R. No. 2, Bloomingsburg, Ohio.

burg, Ohio. "My entire body was affected by neuritis, and often I had to stop working for weeks at a time. The stomach trouble added greatly to my suffering and I was at a loss to know what to do as all medicines failed to benefit me.

"But all that is changed now, simply because I have given Konjola a chance. What a wonderful medicine this is. Working at the root of my ailments it cleansed and invigorated my system. Soon the neuritis pains vanished entirely and then my stomach resumed its normal functioning. But best of all, it took two bottles of this medicine to restore my health. Does this not prove that Konjola is superior?"

Konjola is sold in Xenia at Galaher Drug Store, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.

ROPEMAKERS HAVE RUN FEST AT EXPENSE OF ROTARY; WIN 28-13

The Hooven and Allison Co. softball team swung its heavy artillery into action and butchered the Rotary Club nine by a margin of 28 to 13 in an American League game at Cox Memorial Athletic Field Monday night.

Raining short and long range hits to all corners of the lot, the H. and A. assumed a lead in the third inning that it never relinquished. Rotarians had a flurry

JAMESTOWN BEATS DAYTON TEAM WITH LAST INNING RALLY

Scoring two runs in the last half of the eighth without the aid of a hit, the Jamestown baseball nine added another victory to its growing string by defeating the Penny Athletic Club of Dayton, 5 to 3 Sunday afternoon on the Jamestown diamond.

The game brought together two evenly matched teams. Each club was limited to six hits. Jamestown tallied twice in the first inning on two hits and a walk and added another in the fifth. The visitors tied the score with a run in the fifth and two in the first half of the eighth.

In the last of the eighth, Kiser walked. Ary was safe on an error and advanced to second. Kiser took third on the misplay. Both runners scored when Lafferty, Dayton first baseman, pegged wildly into center field in an effort to catch Ary off second. Those proved to be the winning markers.

SHERIFF FINDS GUN SO MAN ARRESTED

When Sheriff Ohmer Tate visited a grocery conducted by C. L. Edwards, colored, on Jasper Ave., Monday morning to serve an execution on a judgment for $125 obtained against Edwards by Raymond Curl, colored, in Common Pleas Court several days ago, he noticed a suspicious object protruding from the man's hip pocket.

It proved to be a loaded .38 caliber revolver. As a result Edwards is in the County Jail facing a charge of carrying concealed weapons.

The sheriff closed the grocery temporarily until the property can be levied upon to satisfy the judgment, which was granted by a jury in an appeal from a decision of a justice of the peace court.

PLEADS NOT GUILTY ON DRIVING CHARGE

John Black, 21, Bellbrook, pleaded not guilty before Mayor Karl R. Babb Tuesday morning to a charge of reckless driving growing out of the fact his auto is alleged to have knocked down and injured one person and caused the injury of another man when it crashed into the rear of a parked car on S. Detroit St. May 25.

The youth is at liberty under $100 bond and will be given a hearing before Mayor Babb Saturday.

Victims of the accident were Fred Wooley, manager of the local plant of the Louisiana Oil Refining Co., Hill St., who sustained a lacerated scalp and fractured ribs, and Raymond M. Smith, 244 Chestnut St., who was bruised.

RESUME DOG RACING AT WEST JEFFERSON

WEST JEFFERSON, O., June 4.—The "contribution and refund" system of wagering, vindicated by a jury disagreed last week, was successfully operated last night when the West Jefferson Kennel Club re-opened its dog race meeting.

County officials, who arrested and prosecuted H. M. Foster, manager, said they do not expect to interfere with the races again. The track had been closed since the arrests until last night. Tickets were sold and cashed at the betting windows last night.

The World Jamboree is being held to celebrate the twenty-first birthday of the founding of the Boy Scout movement and also to pay tribute to Sir Robert Baden-Powell, chief Scout of the world. More than 400 acres of ground will be under canvas when the big jamboree opens July 31.

In patrol units of eight, under adult leaders, the American Scouts will embark from several different seaports and landing at Liverpool, Harwich, Grimsby, Hull, Goole and Newcastle, will pilgrimage to the Jamboree Camp. Many of the American Scouts will embark on special trains from the various English seaports and be carried to Birkenhead and Upton. From there they will be transported by motor to Arrow Park where the world-gathering is to be held.

Reports from the International Scout Bureau, at London, state that in all more than 15,000 Boy Scouts are expected from countries outside of the British Empire. The Dominions and colonial possessions of Great Britain will send additional 2,000 Scouts to the Jamboree and the remainder of the group will be made up of English Scouts.

Many notables from continental Europe will be present. In previous Jamborees held at four-year intervals, the kings of England, Sweden and Denmark have attended. This year, the Prince of Wales, who is Chief Scout of Wales, will camp with the Scouts. The Duke of Connaught representing the British crown will review the opening parade.

Two Reasons and one Proof

There are two main parts to an automobile tire. One part is called the tread; the other part is called the carcass. These reasons can be demonstrated and proved:

is in the long mileage that U. S. Royal Cords run. Good rubber, which is the life of the tire, is used very plentifully in U. S. Tires thereby assuring you of long mileage and easy riding.

Press your hand down on the Goodyear All-Weather Tread. Feel the grip of the deep-cut sharp-edged blocks, placed in the center of the tread, where they belong.

That is the reason why the tread imprints its safe and slipless pattern on the road, and why it has superior traction.

Rumors are current, at least there are such reports from the East, that the athletic relations between Princeton and Harvard will be renewed in 1931.

One of the most interesting features of the reports is that Harvard, the school which really caused the break several years ago, is making the overtures for the same.

The Harvard Crimson, the school's undergraduate paper, in a recent issue, discusses the subject at some length and says that the present childish attitude of the two colleges toward each other and relations where such would be desirable cannot help but be condemned by persons of logical mind.

The Harvard Alumni Bulletin adds this bit: "If Princeton and Harvard men want their athletic teams to meet, the result doubtless will be brought about in time, but it seems pretty plain that the two colleges, having made up their minds to play football together in 1929 or 1930. We have no knowledge on the subject, but it may well be that the Princeton and Harvard athletic authorities are already discussing the possibilities of a match after 1930."

COLD KEEPS RUTH FROM PLAYING BALL

NEW YORK, June 4.—Babe Ruth will be out of the New York Yankees' lineup for the next several days, possibly a week, because of a heavy cold which showed indications of developing into influenza.

The babe was taken out of the game in the ninth inning last Saturday, when the Yankees were playing the Chicago White Sox. He has not played since. Ruth reported at Yankee stadium yesterday but was ordered to St. Vincent's Hospital for an examination which was said to have disclosed considerable congestion in his chest. He was permitted to go to his home but was told to remain in bed.

LEAPS TO DEATH

CLEVELAND, June 4.—Mrs. Ethel Bender, 32, is dead here from injuries received in a fall or leap from the fourth floor of her apartment.

DREAD NEURITIS YIELDS QUICKLY TO NEW KONJOLA

Pains Forced Him To Lay Off Work For Two Weeks At A Time; Stomach Trouble Also Ended

"After the remarkable manner in which Konjola benefited me, I feel that it is my duty to endorse it to all who suffer," said Mr. J. R. Wood, R. R. No. 2, Bloomington.

MR. J. R. WOOD

burg, Ohio. "My entire body was affected by neuritis, and often I had to stop working for weeks at a time. The stomach trouble added greatly to my suffering and I was at a loss to know what to do as all medicines failed to benefit me.

"But all that is changed now, simply because I have given Konjola a chance. What a wonderful medicine this is. Working at the root of my ailments it cleansed and invigorated my system. Soon the neuritis pains vanished entirely and then my stomach resumed its normal functioning. But best of all, it took two bottles of this medicine to restore my health. Does this not prove that Konjola is supreme?"

Konjola is sold in Xenia at Gallagher Drug Store, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.

ROPEMAKERS HAVE RUN FIST AT EXPENSE OF ROTARY; WIN 28-13

The Hooven and Allison Co. softball team swung its heavy artillery into action and butchered the Rotary Club nine by a margin of 28 to 13 in an American League game at Cox Memorial Athletic Field Monday night.

Raining hard and long range hits to all corners of the lot, the H. and A. assumed a lead in the third inning that it never relinquished. Rotarians had a flurry

JAMESTOWN BEATS DAYTON TEAM WITH LAST INNING RALLY

Scoring two runs in the last half of the eighth without the aid of a hit, the Jamestown baseball nine added another victory to its growing string by defeating the Penny Athletic Club of Dayton, 5 to 3 Sunday afternoon on the Jamestown diamond.

The game brought together two evenly matched teams. Each club was limited to six hits.

Jamestown tallied twice in the first inning on two hits and a walk and added another in the fifth. The visitors tied the score with a run in the fifth and two in the first half of the eighth.

In the last of the eighth, Kiser walked. Ary was safe on an error and advanced to second while Kiser took third on the misplay. Both runners scored when Lafferty Dayton first baseman, pegged wildly into center field in an effort to catch Ary off second. Those proved to be the winning markers.

SHERIFF FINDS GUN SO MAN ARRESTED

When Sheriff Othmer Tate visited a grocery conducted by C. L. Edwards, colored, on Jasper Ave., Monday morning to serve an execution on a judgment for $125 owed against Edwards by Raymond Curly, colored, in Common Pleas Court several days ago, he noticed a suspicious object protruding from the man's hip pocket.

It proved to be a loaded .38 caliber revolver. As a result Edwards is in the County Jail facing a charge of carrying concealed weapons.

The sheriff closed the grocery temporarily until the property can be levied upon to satisfy the judgment, which was granted by a jury in an appeal from a decision of a justice of the peace court.

PLEADS NOT GUILTY ON DRIVING CHARGE

John Black, 21, Bellbrook, pleaded not guilty before Mayor Karl R. Babb Tuesday morning to a charge of reckless driving growing out of the fact his auto is alleged to have knocked down and injured one person and caused the injury of another man when it crashed into the rear of a parked car on S. Detroit St. May 23.

The youth is at liberty under $100 bond and will be given a hearing before Mayor Babb Saturday. Victims of the accident were Fred Wooley, manager of the local plant of the Louisiana Oil Refining Co. Hill St., who sustained a lacerated scalp and fractured ribs, and Raymond M. Smith, 244 Chestnut St., who was bruised.

RESUME DOG RACING AT WEST JEFFERSON

WEST JEFFERSON, O., June 4.—The "contribution and refund" system of wagering, vindicated when a jury disagreed last week, was successfully operated last night when the West Jefferson Kennel Club re-opened its dog race meeting.

County officials, who arrested and prosecuted H. M. Foster, manager, said they do not expect to interfere with the races again. The track had been closed since the arrests until last night. Tickets were sold and cashed at the betting windows last night.

XENIA COAL WINS COUNTY CONTRACT

Contract for supplying the county with 325 tons of coal has been awarded by County Commissioners to the Xenia Coal Co.

The successful bid totaled $1,512, and includes furnishing 200 tons of West Virginia lump to the County Infirmary at $4.54 a ton; delivering 100 tons of the same type of coal to the Court House heating plant at $4.54 a ton, and twenty-five tons of Pocahontas lump for the County Jail at $6 a ton.

Other bids considered were those submitted by the Siles Coal Co. and Stout Coal Co.

Two Reasons and one Proof

There are two main parts to an automobile tire. One part is called the tread; the other part is called the carcass.

These reasons can be demonstrated and proved:

Press your hand down on the Goodyear All-Weather Tread. Feel the grip of the deep-cut sharp-edged blocks, placed in the center of the tread, where they belong.

That is the reason why the tread imprints its safe and slipless pattern on the road, and why it has superior traction.

THE PROOF

is in the long mileage that U. S. Royal Cords run. Good rubber, which is the life of the tire, is used very plentifully in U. S. Tires thereby assuring you of long mileage and easy riding.

THE FLAT TIRE By ALMA SIOUX SCARBERRY AUTHOR OF "MAKE UP" ETC. CENTRAL PRESS ASSN. INC.

CHAPTER I

Behind the fans of grandmother's day they would have called her a poor little wall flower. And they might have added—in ladylike whispers, of course: "My dear, she's twenty if she's a day—and never had a beau!" But Miss 1929 doesn't carry a fan, and she seldom talks in whispers. So there was no mistaking what the two doll-faced, gray-eyed little Benders flappers sauntering by the Matthews gate had aired in the way of an opinion of Vivian Matthews, sitting pensively in a swing on the porch.

A cruel breeze brought it to Vivian's ears—clearly. So that she sank a little deeper into the cushions, and a little lower in her own opinion.

Said the girl in the bright red slip of a dress pulled tightly around her swinging, slender hips: "Poor Viv! She sure is one grand sample of what I call a flat tire."

And her companion giggled deliciously at her own humor. "That baby is so flat she'd make a door mat feel like a first-class mattress."

Vivian Matthews had never in her entire life felt dressed up! Not once in her twenty years had she walked down the streets of Bender with a new dress, or a new hat, or a new flower on her coat and felt that mysterious something that lifts the feminine heart from the slough of despond to the heights.

For that matter, she had never been sure that anyone even LIKED her.

And so, of course, just as a radiant smile and a sunny face draws happiness and love—Vivian's face, reflecting her pensive thoughts, was one that sometimes drew an indifferent glance, and that was about all. The glance was something accompanied by a whispered "poor kid."

For few there were in the small town who didn't know the story of Vivian Matthews and that she was a doorstep waif. Not that it really mattered that she had been found on old Martha Matthews' doorstep one winter night, if Vivian could have forgotten about it herself.

In the Middle West, especially in a town like Bender, Kan., there is very little line drawn between the Nobodys and the Somebodys. Human beings are human beings—if they are nice and friendly and "respectable."

Zeek Wales, a Bender swain, and the town ice man, passed the Matthews cottage, and in response to a cherry "Hi Viv," received a dejected "good evening."

He summed her up in so many words to Mary Barnes, who was going to the movies with him: "Poor old Viv wants to be a good egg. Mary, but she's got an awful inferiority complex. I read about it in a book last winter. It's something you get—well, kind of a disease, and it makes you think you don't amount to nothin'. See what I mean?"

Mary agreed it would be a "terrible thing to get and 'hoped it wasn't catchin'."

Vivian, staring after the strolling couple, was in a blue funk. Even Mary Barnes, domestic, had a beau. And Mary certainly had no claim to beauty. Zeek could run rings around her when it came to looks. He was really quite handsome.

She swung lazily, and closed her eyes. They were very green eyes, pensive, slanted, peculiar eyes. They held you with sort of an odd fascination if you bothered looking at them long enough. But few had except Cubby Sullivan, next door. Except Chubby Sullivan, next door. He had said:

"You got eyes like green peppers layin' on their backs, Viv. Gosh, they're runny-spooky."

But who was Cubby, anyway? Only a camera man for a news service in Chicago! A little sawed-off, red-headed wise cracking boy she had known all her life. Still he was nice—and he had said of her hair:

"Viv, in the light, your hair is just full of fire. You're a red head with a brunette heart. Is red heads got to live up to our hair?"

Though grateful for the bit of flattery, Vivian had protested: "It looks like mouse brown to me. So straight!"

And her rather long, patrician face, with the straight, aristocratic nose and the full red mouth, had taken on its serious look. Such a respectable look, too! You would have looked at her then and sworn she was a girl who had committed no wrong and would be incapable of even such a thought.

Flat tires are always respectable. It was June. The round, red sun, literally sinking into the plains in a ball of crimson, touched the little western hamlet with fingers of flame. They seemed to shoot out from the Matthews cottage like little tongues of fire—alive and trying to lick up the shadows. For a moment Vivian was lifted from her blue thoughts and taken up with the beauty of the maple lined street, with its tiny low homes. She was a lover of nature—and it stirred her.

Its beauty seemed to pull her from the swing, and she walked slowly toward the gate—drinking in the winey, breeze filled twilight. Then she heard a whistle. A figure swung slowly, with panther-like grace, around the corner, and she would have turned back—but it was too late. It was the only whistle, and the only walk, that could send her heart fluttering like a scared birdie in her breast, and put weights on her feet.

She leaned against the gate to steady herself. And there beside her was a tall boy, wearing a heavy woolen sweater despite the warm summer evening. Because across the front of it was a huge "K" and it was a very special sweater.

"Kent! John! You back from K. U. already?" Vivian found her voice in spite of the hammering of her heart.

"Yea, boy!" A huge hand reached out and took her smaller one in a friendly grasp. "Been back two days. Graduated, y'no."

"Congratulations! And I see you won a letter."

He stood every inch of his six feet two then, his crisp black hair standing straight on his head like a shaggy dog's, and his blue eyes sparkled their pride.

"Thanks, yeah. I'm sitting in a reserved seat, right on top of the ole heap!"

His eyes took in the little street. "Doesn't seem anytime since we were kids in school, does it, Vivian?"

"It seems—a thousand years to me," Vivian sighed. "Cooped up here, I can imagine the time has flown for you."

"I'll say it has," he laughed, and shook her by the elbows. "Still the same little sad-eyed Sally sit by the fire, aren't you, Viv?"

He could not imagine how his words stung. But before she could reply he grinned at her impishly and plunged a knife still deeper into her sore heart.

"I prescribe marriage for you. That's what I'm going to do, Vivian, and her mother are coming over from Paris in two weeks—and me for the old storm and struggle stuff."

Somehow she choked out congratulations. She knew they were engaged, of course. But to hear Kent say it—with his face so radiant with happiness!

"Vivian, honest," he teased amiably, "marriage is the only thing for a good little girl like you. Why don't you pick yourself out a nice husband?"

She answered him then, bitterly: "Yes! Pick myself out a husband. See how they hang about my door, begging my favor." She waved an arm to indicate the crowd.

lions!" Vivian ended by calling him "plumb conceited."

"Call me what you will darling," the endearment fell from his lips with nonchalant carelessness—but she hugged it to her heart. "There is one thing I can say in your favor, anyway. The man who marries you will be plenty sure of you, all right. You'd never start playing around—cheating on him."

"I'm too dumb, I suppose. Besides, not more than one man ever will give me a second look. At least no one ever has."

He broke in on her with another laugh: "Just a goli that men forget." (TO BE CONTINUED)

Where is the woman who can hold her

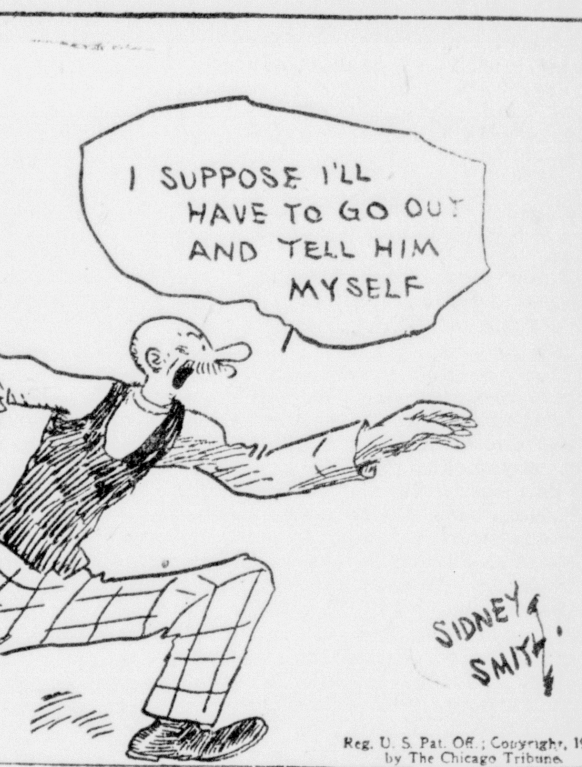

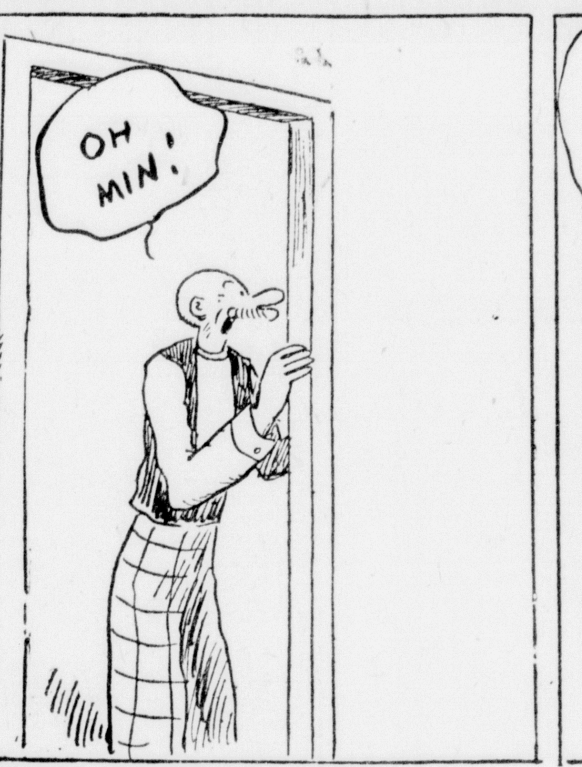

A black and white illustration by Paul Robinson. It depicts a man and a woman in a romantic, dancing pose. The man, on the left, is wearing a dark tuxedo with a white shirt and bow tie. He is holding the woman from behind. The woman, on the right, is wearing a long, light-colored, flowing dress and a necklace. She is looking up at the man with a smile. The background consists of stylized, dark foliage and a small, decorative, bell-shaped object hanging from a branch. The artist's signature, "Paul Robinson," is written in the lower right corner of the illustration.

The Theater

Presentation of "In The Next Room," a mystery play, by the Xenia Little Theater Guild here Wednesday night, is another link in the chain of evidence of the growing popularity of the mystery theme in fiction and drama.

Except for only occasional spurts of mystery, as exemplified by Mary Roberts Rinehart's "The Bat," there has not been such a wave of sentiment toward this type of fiction since Anna Katharine Greene was the toast of hall-bedrooms and the stage has seen nothing like it in years.

Then comes S. S. Van Dine, that distinguished man of letters mas-quering under nom-de-plume to write mystery fiction and William Powell helped make "The Canary Murder Case" one of the best pictures of the last year. There followed the talkies, "The Bellamy Trial," "The Trial of Mary Dugan," "Alibi" and others, all with a crime background and more or less mystery theme.

Sax Rohmer, J. P. Fletcher, E. Phillips Oppenheim and other writers of detective and mystery fiction, have begun to find a popular demand for their stuff. Even Ben Ames Williams has deserted his provincial localities for the field of mystery as witness his "Death in Scurry Street."

The Theater Guild was following a trend of popular approval in offering a mystery drama, and people who have witnessed rehearsals, say that "In the Next Room" will be well-done by the amateurs. Opening the doors of the theater to the public for the final offering of the year, should also prove a popular move.

UNDERGROUND A LOVE AND MYSTERY STORY

By J. JEFFERSON FARJEON

Copyright, 1929, by Central Press Association, Inc.

CHAPTER XLVIII
Rupert turned to Joscelyn. With deeper love than he had ever felt in his heart, he spoke to her there.

"Go!" he shouted. "Do you love me?"
"I don't waste time," Rupert answered, with a sudden smile. "Do you think life ought ever mean anything to Miss Cunningham and me if we deserted you and your friend now—after the way you've both stuck to us?" She shook her head. "Let's try and put him together—and get him as far away from here as we can!"

And then, from a corner, a large form suddenly shot into view.
"Miss Marlowe!" exclaimed the newcomer, pausing and staring.
Joscelyn started back.
"Mr. Jarvis," she gasped, her face suddenly becoming illuminated with inexpressible relief. "Quick!" she cried. "Don't ask questions. Lift this man, and carry him out. We must be out of here in two minutes—out of the Coomber House—as far from it as possible."

Jarvis knew his job. He knew when to ask questions, and when to postpone the asking. Before she had finished speaking, he had sprung forward and had begun to lift Charlie on his back, and in ten seconds he had completed the task.
"Get back!" he shouted to the constable, who had abruptly added his startled cry to the company. "Get out of the house quick! The lot of you. And out into the lane!"

The constable needed no more. He led a race which he subsequently described as the queerest he had ever known, or ever hoped to know. He tripped and stumbled through dark passages, and scrambled up stairs, with a crowd of breathless folk after him, and he hadn't the slightest idea what he was running from. Even when he was back in the hall of Coomber House, and was shouting to all and sundry to leave it, he was totally ignorant of the cause of the trouble. So were all the other constables who fled with him.

But when they actually reached the lane, the mystery was revealed. An explosion, the sound of which exceeded anything within the constable's previous experience, suddenly rent the air. Coomber House shook, tottered, and fell. And all along the coast, side as far as the old mine hill, the thunder of the explosion reverberated, and the land opened, yawned and belched.

"Oo see there! no earthquakes in Northumberland!" demanded the constable that night.
"What is happening?" asked the foreigner.

Brown's reply may have been inaudible, for it countered the prevailing impression of the catastrophe; but as was in a frame of emotion when the question was put to him, and was not in a mood for sagacity.
"A damn skunk's been blown up!" he answered.

The foreigner's interest was not decreased by this picturesque statement. He stared at Brown rather searchingly for a moment, then put a second question.
"Was the damn skunk's name Simon Brill, by any chance?" he queried.

Now it was Brown who stared.
"That's right," he answered. "Simon Brill. Why, did you know him?"

The foreigner smiled faintly.

"I had a little business to complete with him," he said. "but, of course—if the damn skunk is dead—the business will have to be completed in another world. Good evening, sir."

And the stranger turned and departed. And was never seen in Byford Moor again.

And, not long afterward, Brown left Byford Moor himself. The local excitement that might have held him in Byford Moor continued for several days. (An earthquake is not an ordinary sort of experience, especially when its victims number an old man found beneath a house, a tramp found in a ditch, and a couple of horsey looking strangers found at the foot of a steep hill.) Brown managed to be lured, also, by certain other events of a quieter nature that contributed to make the sleepy village interesting. A stout young man, for instance, made blatant love to the daughter of a professor in whose house he was recuperating from a wounded leg. The professor, himself, spent considerable time in meditation and in destroying certain papers which, although they possessed financial value, had grown suddenly distasteful to him, and had appeared in his new philosophy better out of the world than in it. And two other young people, fellow guests at the Yellow Stag, took suspiciously long trips over the moors, and returned home in the evenings suspiciously happy.

Yes, there were many things to interest Brown in Byford Moor after the military looking foreigner had departed from it, but Brown resisted them. Perhaps he felt that Byford Moor was no longer interested in him. Perhaps he felt that reality could be too exhausting, and too sparing—in its fruits—and that dreams, after all, were the only dependable things for a lonely, humble man. Or perhaps he felt he could not risk losing his job.

Whatever his reasons, he left Byford Moor deliberately and abruptly, and only one or two people in the neighborhood remembered that he had ever been there. But Brown remembered. And he still remembers. Once a week he goes to a restaurant in King's Cross and orders a poached egg on toast. And, while he eats it, pretty eyes watch him through soft mists, and he experiences the thrill of the unattainable. He watches covertly for adventure, too. Will it return one day? It has not returned yet.

Maybe that is because, while Brown eats his poached egg on toast, there is no longer a poor laborer to keep him company, three hundred miles away, with bread and cheese.

For some, imagination; for others, the reality. Two days after the so-called earthquake, Joscelyn Marlowe and Rupert Blake sat in the garden of Moor House—where, with Charlie Carfax, they were installed as temporary guests—talking for the hundredth time over the amazing event.

"What is happening?" asked the foreigner.
Brown's reply may have been inaudible, for it countered the prevailing impression of the catastrophe; but as was in a frame of emotion when the question was put to him, and was not in a mood for sagacity.

She stopped abruptly. Her eyes filled with tears. Rupert watched her gravely, and then spoke quietly.

"Yes, and now you're alone," he said. "Don't you feel thrown back upon yourself? Why—why—must I feel it more than I do?"

"Perhaps,"
"Yet you questioned just now whether it was a rotten prospect or not. Tell me honestly—do you like your prospects?"
"I don't believe in self-pity, Mr. Blake."

"Nor do I! And 'Mr. Blake' be hanged, Joscelyn. After all we've been through together, am I still to be 'Mr. Blake'?"

She smiled through lashes that were still wet.

"Not if you don't like, Rupert."

"I don't like, Joscelyn! And now let's get back to my question. Do you like your prospects?"

"I don't know."
"Does that mean—you don't know yet what they are?" he exclaimed, eagerly.

"Of course, it doesn't mean that!" she replied, now flushing frankly. "My prospects are—"

"To be my wife! Aren't they?"
"Rupert," she gasped.

"You've not denied it! And, if your prospects are to be my wife, are they still rotten? Oh, my darling, don't let's feel we've ended our adventure—let's feel that we've just begun it! May we? Can we?"

Charlie Carfax, recuperating behind a window on the first floor of the house, glanced out suddenly and exclaimed:

"Softly, Celia! Approach! And feast your eyes on a goodly sight. And as Celia drew up to him, he slipped his arm around her waist and whispered: "But we got there first, didn't we, my child?"

MISS MARY TYSON CLAIMED BY DEATH

Miss Mary Virginia Tyson, 73, died at the home of Mrs. Mary Oxley, Bowersville, Monday evening at 7 o'clock after an illness lasting five months. Heart trouble was the direct cause of the death.

Miss Tyson was born December 18, 1856, the daughter of John and Susan Buckwalter Tyson. Her mother died when she was only eight months old leaving her to be cared for by her grandparents. She came to Ohio about 27 years ago to care for her aged father and step-mother and has lived with the Buckwalter families in Ohio

SALMON OR TUNA FISH au Gratin

Flake 1 can of "E" BRAND SELECTED PINK SALMON or "E" BRAND TUNA FISH. Add 2 eggs, 2 ounces of butter, stock from salmon or tuna fish can, season with salt and pepper. Mix and heat in bowl, add 1 cup soft stale bread and enough milk to soften. Bake in deep buttered dish until top is nice brown.

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

What's in a name! In this case, back of the name on the can, there is the story of a long trip through the Arctic seas to the canneries furthest north, made by the head of the Eavey Company that he might personally inspect and select the salmon used for canning under the "E" label. Therefore when we say we mean salmon that was especially selected for its fine flavor, its delicate texture and its extra quality. The fact that it is packed in a cannery where absolute cleanliness and carefulness is a law, is also another factor in its selection. This salmon is not so deep in color as some—but for delicious flavor and fine quality meat it is not excelled by any. In fact it is the prime favorite of the native Alaskans who are truly expert salmon judges.

"E" BRAND SELECTED PINK SALMON

"E" BRAND TUNA FISH

Just like the tenderest white meat of chicken and with a sweet, mild flavor that delights the most fastidious this fish sets a new standard of tastiness! Open a can—note the fine texture of the meat and get the delicate appetizing flavor that is free from any strong, fishy taste. It is ideal for use for a great variety of dainty, appetizing summer dishes, and is far more healthful than heavy meats.

A LOVE AND MYSTERY STORY

BY J. JEFFERSON FARJEON

Copyright, 1929, by Central Press Association, Inc.

CHAPTER XLVIII
Rupert turned to Joscelyn. With deeper love than he had ever felt in his heart, he spoke to her. "You're not a girl," he said. "Do you know?"

"I don't know," she answered, with a sudden smile. "Do you think life ought ever mean anything to Miss Cunningham and me if we deserted you and your friend now—after the way you've both stuck to us?" She shook her head. "Let's try and put it together—and get him as far away from here as we can!"

And then, round a corner, a large form suddenly shot into view. "Miss Marlowe!" exclaimed the newcomer, pausing and staring.

Joscelyn started back. "Mr. Jarvis," she gasped, her face suddenly becoming illuminated. "With inexpressible relief!" "Quick!" she cried. "Don't ask questions. Lift this man, and carry him out. We must be out of this in two minutes—out of Coomber House—as far from it as possible—"

Jarvis knew his job. He knew when to ask questions, and when to postpone the asking. Before she had finished speaking, he had sprung forward and had begun to lift Charlie on his back, and in ten seconds he had completed the task.

"Get back!" he shouted to the constable, who had abruptly added his started voice to the company. "Get out of the house quick! The lot of you. And out into the jail!" The constable needed no more. He led a race which he subsequently described as the queerest he had ever known, or ever hoped to know. He tripped and stumbled through dark passages, and accompanied upstairs, with a crowd of breathless folk after him, and he hadn't the slightest idea what he was running from. Even when he was back in the hall of Coomber House, and was shouting to all and sundry to leave it, he was totally ignorant of the cause of the trouble. So were all the other constables who fled with him.

But when they actually reached the lane, the mystery was revealed. An explosion, the sound of which exceeded anything within the constable's previous experience, suddenly rent the air. Coomber House shook, tottered, and fell. And all along the country side, as far as the old mine hill, the thunder of the explosion reverberated, and the land opened, yawned and belched. "Oo see there! no earthquake in Northumberland?" demanded the constable that night.

Another man listened to the earthquake, and viewed its results with considerable interest. It was a tall, rather stately, rather military-looking figure, and Brown bumped into him as he was escaping along the lane.

"What is happening?" asked the foreigner.

Brown's reply may have been inaudible, for it countered the prevailing impression of the catastrophe; but it was in a frame of emotion when the question was put to him, and was not in a mood for sagacity.

"A damn skunk's been blown up!" he answered.

The foreigner's interest was not decreased by this picturesque statement. He stared at Brown rather searchingly for a moment, then put a second question. "Was the damn skunk's name Simon Brill, by any chance?" he queried.

Now it was Brown who stared. "That's right," he answered. "Simon Brill. Why, did you know him?"

The foreigner smiled faintly. "I had a little business to complete with him," he said, "but, of course—if the damn skunk is dead—the business will have to be completed in another world. Good evening, sir."

And the stranger turned and departed. And was never seen in Byford Moor again.

And not long afterward, Brown left Byford Moor himself. The local excitement that might have held him in Byford Moor continued for several days. (An earthquake is not an ordinary sort of experience, especially when its victims number an old man found beneath a house, a tramp found in a ditch, and a couple of bony looking strangers found at the foot of a steep hill.) Brown refused to be lured, also, by certain other events of a quieter nature that contributed to make the sleepy village interesting. A stout young man, for instance, made blatant love to the daughter of a professor in whose house he was recuperating from a wounded leg. The professor, himself, spent considerable time in meditation and in destroying certain papers which, although they possessed financial value, had grown suddenly distasteful to him, and had appeared in his new philosophy better out of the world than in it. And two other young people, fellow guests at the Yellow Stag, took suspiciously long trips over the moors, and returned home in the evenings suspiciously happy.

Yes, there were many things to interest Brown in Byford Moor after the military looking foreigner had departed from it, but Brown remembered. Perhaps he felt that Byford Moor was no longer interested in him. Perhaps he felt that reality could be too exhausting, and too sparing—in its fruits—and that dreams, after all, were the only dependable things for a lonely, humble man. Or perhaps he felt he could not risk losing his job.

Whatever his reasons, he left Byford Moor deliberately and abruptly, and only one or two people in the neighborhood remembered that he had ever been there. But Brown remembered. And he still remembers. Once a week he goes to a restaurant in King's Cross and orders a poached egg on toast. And, while he eats it, pretty eyes watch him through soft mists, and he experiences the thrill of the unattainable. He watches covertly for adventure, too. Will it return one day? It has not returned yet.

Maybe that is because, while Brown eats his poached egg on toast, there is no longer a poor laborer to keep him company, three hundred miles away, with bread and cheese.

For some, imagination; for others, the reality. Two days after the so-called earthquake, Joscelyn Marlowe and Rupert Blake sat in the garden of Moor View—where, with Charlie Carfax, they were installed as temporary guests—talking for the hundredth time over the amazing along the lane.

"What is happening?" asked the foreigner.

Brown's reply may have been inaudible, for it countered the prevailing impression of the catastrophe; but it was in a frame of emotion when the question was put to him, and was not in a mood for sagacity.

"A damn skunk's been blown up!" he answered.

meet his eye. "The cloud has been lifted from the Cunninghams' home—and I've found out what happened to my father—"

She stopped abruptly. Her eyes filled with tears. Rupert watched her gravely, and then spoke quietly. "Yes, and now you're alone," he said. "Don't you feel thrown back upon yourself? Why—you must feel it more than I do."

"Perhaps."

"Yet you questioned just now whether it was a rotten prospect or not. Tell me honestly—do you like your prospects?"

"I don't believe in self-pity, Mr. Blake."

"Nor do I! And 'Mr. Blake' be hanged, Joscelyn. After all we've been through together, am I still to be 'Mr. Blake'?"

She smiled through lashes that were still wet.

"Not if you don't like, Rupert."

"I don't like, Joscelyn! And now let's get back to my question. Do you like your prospects?"

"I don't know."

"Does that mean—you don't know yet what they are?" he exclaimed, eagerly.

"Of course, it doesn't mean that," she replied, now flushing frankly. "My prospects are—"

"To be my wife! Aren't they?"

"You've not denied it! And, if your prospects are to be my wife, are they still rotten? Oh, my darling, don't let's feel we've ended our adventure—let's feel that we've just begun it! May we? Can we?"

Charlie Carfax, recuperating behind a window on the first floor of the house, glanced out suddenly and exclaimed:

"Softly, Celia! Approach! And feast your eyes on a goodly sight!" And as Celia drew up to him, he whispered his arm around her waist and whispered: "But we got there first, didn't we, my child?"
